A. SHEPHERD, Colonial Treasurer.

Dated this 3rd day of May, 1852.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland,
14th May, 1852.

HIS Excellency the LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR has been pleased to direct that, for general information, the following Letter be published, and with reference thereto, that it be notified that he has authorized the sum of Five Pounds to be paid to each of the Chiefs, BROWN and BUSBY, as a token of his approbation of their humane and praiseworthy conduct on the occasion referred to.

By His Excellency's command,
ANDREW SINCLAIR, Colonial Secretary.

Auckland, May 1st, 1852.

SIR—Believing that it would be the wish of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor to confer a reward upon a deserving native chief for humane and hospitable treatment to the officers and crew of a shipwrecked vessel, and for honesty and integrity towards the owners of the wreck, I do myself the honour to request that you will have the goodness to bring under the consideration of His Excellency the treatment experienced by myself, officers, and crew, in the case of the recent wreck of the whaling brig Maukin, of this port.

Having been driven ashore in the tremendous gale of the sixth of March last, near North Cape, we saw no natives for three days, during which time we succeeded in saving some provisions, sails, and other things, with which we made tents, and encamped.

On the third day, a native who was travelling espied the wreck and our encampment, came down, and remained a short time with us. His visit was the same evening followed by the arrival of about forty men, and a number of women and children. These people displayed the most friendly disposition, and when I wanted a guide towards Auckland, Brown, the chief at Pahrengarenga, furnished me with one.

I immediately travelled across to Ahipara, and as soon as the native chief, Busby, heard of my arrival there, he came over from Kaitaia, and the next day started for the wreck, where his presence was very beneficial.

During my absence the natives invited the officers and men to remove their camp to the settlement at Pahrengarenga, about three miles distant, where they would be much more comfortable, and the chief, to ensure the safety of the property left behind, tabooed the place, so that no native should go there unaccompanied by one of the ship's people. Prior to the removal of the camp, the mate observed that the lead of the ship's scuppers had been cut out of the wreck, of which he complained, when it was immediately restored.

When removing to the settlement, every one of the natives, male and female, came to assist in carrying the tents, provisions, &c., over three miles of most difficult country, without stipulating for fee or reward.

During the entire stay of the party at the wreck, and at the settlement, only one theft of any kind was committed by a native; this was of a small quantity of sugar, not worth a shilling. On a complaint being made to the chief, the thief was brought before him, and a kind of semijudicial investigation was conducted with great deliberation and care, and, upon conviction, the culprit was sentenced by Busby to pay to the officer in command the sum of twenty-four shillings. This the mate declined to accept, being satisfied that the authority exercised by Busby would prevent similar occurrences.

On the whole, Sir, I think it my duty, knowing as I do the fate that too often awaits shipwrecked mariners on the coasts of countries professedly civilized, to place on record this instance of conduct of the native New Zealanders in like circumstances; and this at such a distance from any European Settlement, that, had they chosen to have taken not only our property, but our lives, totally unarmed as we were, prevention would have been impossible, and, from the nature of the country, impunity almost certain.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
ROBERT J. EAMES,
Late master of the "Maukin."

The Honourable
The Colonial Secretary.
